Editorial Correspondence. FARMINGTON, Oct. 5, 1866. DEAR FARMER:-We are now in the Sandy River Valley, so well known for its fertile soil. This valley was well knewn to the Indians, and on an ancisurvey it is named Penopsquesumsquesnaboo, which literally means the Little-rocky-little-clear-river. We never before could explain why the sandy lands of this river were so much more fertile than the say kind of soil in other portions of the State. Two reasons may be given: The ledges in the vicinity are composed of micacco-argillaceous slate, which by their decomposition produces more or less of clay and conducive to a warm soil. Another reason may be that this valley was once a chain of From Farmington to New Sharon there is a wide expanse of intervale along which are beds of clay sediment, which must at some time have formed the bottom of a lake. These intervals are made up of several terraces, the lowest of which are overflowed by the river during freshets, which bring down untold wealth from the mountain country in the north. The town is situated on the south side of the range of mountains which runs east and west across the State. Mt. Blue, about 4000 feet high stands sentinel over the surrounding country. On this the

The village at Farmington Hill is one of the handsomest in the State. It is regularly laid out, its streets are wide, its buildings are in good order, its shade trees, mostly the maple, are abundant, its public buildings substantial and in good taste. Situated at the terminus of the Androscoggin railroad it is the centre of a large extent of country, consequently its trade is extensive. Its uplands are fertile for pasturage which serves to increase its wealth. The State Normal School is located here, which we recently noticed. Among the notabilities of the place, is the famous Abbot School for Boys. It is now under the direction of Hon. E. P. Weston, whose experience as a teacher well fits him for the position. We visited the school and were surprised to see how extensive were the arrangements for instruction of the boys. About seventy boys-the largest number ever assembled constitutes the present term. Everything goes on like clock work, while the confidence which they seem to repose in their teacher is of the most gratify-

Sickness prevented our attendance as we intended, for we wished to become acquainted with at least fifty farmers during the Show. The exhibition of stock was said to be the best ever held in the county. On the last day we had the pleasure of addressing the assembled crowd. The best part of this thing is a little too good to be lost. As we walked back to the village after the address, we were invited to ride. Being fairly seated, our strange friend not recognizing us, asked us how we liked the address. We told him we thought it was very good.

We stepped into the steam-mill there and found this to be the place where the famous Hersey Patent apple Parer is made. This is a most ingenious Yankee invention, and the demand for them is fully equal to the supply.

Farmington being a shire town abounds in professionat men. It has a bank, two printing offices, in one who chronicles well the local affairs of the town.

The prospect and a blessing to the brave men whose misfortunes in from this hill is very fine. On its sides is a large sugar orchard. It is said that forty barrels of sap were collected here in one day. The ride from Farmington down the Sandy River to New Sharon-nine miles-is delightful. The farmers all along the river exhibit an air of thrift and independence.

We left the town highly gratified with our visit, and with more enlarged views of the capabilities of our own beloved State than ever. Our obligations are due to a large number of the citizens for courtesies received during our visit to the town.

A LOOK. There is sometimes something peculiarly terrific in the look of a man, especially when in anger. There is a time in every one's history which he can remember when he seemed paralyzed by the fierce gaze of some man or woman. There is a certain expression about the eye which strikes terror even to a tout heart. The same power is exhibited by animals. We remember once reading an account of a man who had stolen a couple of kittens from a catamount during her absence. The mother missing her young on her return gave pursuit. The captor seeing her coming dropped the kittens and ran for life. On coming up with her young she gave one terrible glance at h enemy as he turned round, which struck him with terror. A boy who is stealing fruit will never forget the scene if he should by chance be caught by the owner in the act. The late Professor Cleaveland was a remarkable man in this respect. It was his invariable custom when a student entered the room after he commenced his lecture, to stop suddenly, raise his never afterwards forget. Some physiologists have asserted that there is no expression in the eye, but that it owes it all to the muscular expression of the face. This may be so, but we are inclined to think that when the individual is excited, the eye glistens more brilliantly than when the system is calm. Even a common house cat which has no muscular expression of the face will look terribly from her eyes, when in a fit of rage. Insane people often express much from the eye when in a state of frenzy. The feeling of awe is impressed upon a subject when gazed upon by royalty. Any man clothed with authority will command a greater influence by his look than he otherwise could have done as an equal. Some men have a rigid face which demands no effort on their part to make an impression upon others. Some persons have no particular expression at all, and yet command respect. Gen. Grant has no expression, yet his past acts have made the people who gaze at him, believe that he has some meaning in that sort of dogged look of his which nobody can read. There is indeed a deal of power in a look when coupled with the prominent past acts of an individual.

The Conflagration at Quebec.

We made a brief mention last week of the disastrous conflagration which occurred in Quebec on Sunday morning, 14th inst. To appreciate the calamity which has befallen the people of that city, it should be remembered that it was a population of only about 60,000, and that nearly a third of the number have been made houseless and desitute at the beginning of a long, sold winter. The subarts overran were northwest of the old walled city, between that and the river. On the other side, toward the river, it had worked its way with equal rapidity, as far as St. Anselmo street laterally, and as far as King street, sweeping everything before it over the burned district of last year, on which several new and substantial brick had been exacted and upon which in front of the same had been exacted and upon which in front of the same had been exacted and upon which in front of the same had been exacted and upon which in front of the same had been exacted and upon which in front of the same had been exacted and upon which in front of the same had been exacted and upon which in front of the same had been exacted and upon which in front of the surrender.

of working in the midst of the fire in the narrow streets of S'. Sauveur, where the devouring element actually flew from house to house of the almost numberless small wooden buildings in that quarter, roaring and crackling, its fiery tongues overleaping the streets, and literally bounding on the devoted houses like wild beasts on their prey. For some time several large houses along the south side of St. Valier street offered a stout resistance to the flames but they several large houses along the south side of St. Valier street offered a stout resistance to the flames, but they were overcome in the end, and soon wrapped in the general sweep of destruction. The fire had now eaten into the heart almost of St. Sauveur, ravaging it from the cliff down to St. Valier street, which it swept along on both sides to the St. Sauveur Church. For a considerable time, the church withstood the attack of the fiery element, but like the rest it was forced at last also to succumb. Postsibitending the extraordinary next followed, and the flames continued to spread in the direction of Boisseauville, without the slightest abatement.

On the other side of St. Valier street, the fire after crossing Caron street discoted its desolating course in a westerly direction, aweeping the whole space comprised between the General Hospital and St. Valier street, to almost a stone's throw of the toll-bar, where it again traversed St. Valier street, heading the fire around the St. Sauveur Church, and sweeping of everything before it to the Bijoa. About noon there was a slight lull in the gale, and the wind shifted round to the southwest, bringing the fire back in the direction of Crown street, where it debouched between Prince Edward and Smith streets, in the immediate vicinity of the Marine hospital. About three o'clock the conflagration had gained its hight, and at that time the whole district, from Crown street—the latter not included, however, with the exception of the six or seven houses already mentioned, and a small angle untouched from Delair street to Valier street, so far as its intersection with Caron street, down to the water's edge on the north side, and to St. Valier street on the other, as far as the Bijou swamp and the toll-bar to the West—a distance across of about a mile and a half—was one complete mass of roaring flame, presenting one of the most desolating and awfully sub-lime spectacles we have ever witnessed.

No description of oursean give an adequate idea of the awful spectacle presented by the conflagration during its various stages. Viewed from the brow of the cliff, the entire valley beneath bore the appearance of a seething cauldron from the surface of which rose dense clouds of blinding smoke, with clouds of flying states in the surface of which rose dense clouds of blinding smoke, with clouds of flying states in the surface of the blue vault above, where they hung over the doomed district like a funeral pall, the sombreness of which was only relieved at intervals by the occasional bursting through of the glare of the flames shooting up their forked and hissing tongues toward the heavens, and falling back as suddenly. It was only after nightfall, however, that the full extent of the desolating scene could be properly taken in. As far as the eye could reach, on all sides, the whole valley beneath seemed perfectly littered with fire. The remains of stores and workshops, and thousands of happy, though lowly homes; while some of the larger buildings, such as the Church of St. Sauveur, the Presbytery, the Nunnery and Friars' School, stood out in bolder relief, with the lurid light of the smoothering flames still glaring a isastrous fire in the same quarter last year, and aterally toward the river side, leaping actually from house to house, and spreading terror and dismay everywhere on its path.

"When an investigation of the robbery was made, it was assertained that the previous afternoon four men had hired a conveyance at Portland, and returning the same night, had left the team at the stable and when the water did arrive at last, the flames had obtained too strong a headway in every quarter to save any one of the building already attacked, and the attention of the fire brigade and of their assistants, was turned to the prevention of the further spread, it possible, of the devouring element, by pulling down some of the houses ahead of the fire, and drenching others with water. In the rear of the Jacque Cartier Hall, their praiseworthy efforts in this way were effectually frustrated for a time by the acts of some unknown ruffians, who deliberately out the hose with axes, their intention being, doubtless, to hinder as far as possible any attempt to check the progress of the fire, in order to give themselves ample opportunity to rob and slaughter. Increasing in volume and density at every step, and impelled by the wind which seemed at every moment to gather new strength and blow in at every step, and impelled by the wind which seemed at every moment to gather new strength and blow in fitful gusts, whirling the burning debris on all sides, and driving clouds of ardent cinders before it, to fall further off, and augment the continually widening mass of flame; the fire continued to rapidly advance to the southwest, the inflammable material which is everywhere met in the small wooden houses in that quarter, the numerous outhouses, stables and woodpiles adding fuel to it at every step, until it cut diagonally through St. Roch's, debouching upon St. Valier street, at its intersection with Caron, about half-past nine o'clock.

Several times its strong stone walls were actually steaming with intense heat, but fortunately, as the buildings around gradually burists out, the danger disappeared. The new houses on the old burnt district, already referred to, resisted for a long flue, but they had at last also to yield to the extraordinary fury of the fire.

By eleven o'clock the fire had traversed Caron street and was raging violently in the district beyond that thoroughfare, aweeping in one continuous flame from the General Hospital on the water side to St. Valier street and was gaining swiftly toward the cliff, fellowing the west side of Caron street, and plunging, seething and roaring before the wind, into the densely in a second reason. ing and rearing before the wind, into the densely into a Sixth avenue car, when the crowd rushed in packed mass of houses that spread from the street in question St. Sauveur and Boisseauville to the swamp police. By this time, so extensive officers of the Twenty-eight Precinct had not gone to was the conflagration, and so utterly inadequate were the means of checking it in any way that all hopes of the means of checking it in any way that all hopes of doing so were almost completely abandoned.

In fact it was impossible for any one to stand for a moment within fifty yards of the flames, not to speak of working in the midst of the fire in the narrow streets of St. Sauvenr. where the devouring element

The members of the ballet troupe and French circus company, not speaking English, could not understand what orders were given in relation to the boats, and very few, if any, managed to reach them. The shrieks of frantic women could be heard above the roar of the angry waves, rushing to and froimploring for aid, but it was each for himself.

The boats were all capsized, and those who had reached them were clinging to their sides, but the heavy seas would wash them away, when others more fortunate would quickly fill their places. There are only twenty-three persons saved. Beside the purser's boat, which arrived at Savannah with ten persons, a boat containing the third mate and five persons, with two dead bodies, has arrived at Fernandina, Florida. The schooner Morning Star picked up one of the lifeboats, containing Jas. W. Lyon, pilot; John Borny, cook; Andrew McMahon, assistant engineer; A. Sanza, E. A. "The storm that day (Tuesday) and throughout the succeeding night is described as one of the severest ever known on the Atlantic coast. The passengers worked faithfully with the crew in all their efforts to save the ship, and even many ladies engaged themselves to the latest moment in the desperate work, and only quailed when the fearful announcement was made by the captain that the ship must go down! This was indeed a most awful moment—one which no pen can justif describe. Out in mid ocean, companion to the howling tempest, the sea lashed into fury by the wind which came with the force of some solid substance; there, on a great ship, tossed and buffeited about like a child's toy or bubble on the breeze, what could they hope for in this wild commotion with only an open row-boat to bear them on? Some, with clasped hands, stood in mute despair, while others raved frantically and cried out to their companions, 'Oh, save me! Save me!' The mother was seen to press her child closer, and the husband the wife to his bosom. Others ran from the deck into the salcons, and there bent down in some corner to await the end.

A husband (an army officer) was seen with his dead and two the racognized.

This was six o'clock Wednesday morning, October Mr. H. H. Harris, have arrived in New York, and the following particulars of the disaster derived from statements made by these gentlemen, have been published in the New York papers. The Tribune says:

"By their statements, it appears that the Evening of Star emountered a terrific gale on the evening of Metanilla Reef. At midnight on the 2d inst., her rudder chains were broken, and the vessel, being annuangeable, lay in the trough of the ses.

The waves were breaking over her all night, her upper works being all carried away. Both the wheel houses were swept off, nothing remaining but the iron frances. The pilot-house and guards had also been carried away. About 6 o'clock a heavy sea rolled over her starboard quarter, sinking her almost immediately; and then ensued a heart-rending some. A piece of the hurricane deck, one hundred feet long, was crowded with human beings. There were but four life preservers on board, which was distributed among the ladies. The captain now opened the doors on each side of the secial hall, and efforts were about to be made to get the ladies into the boats. It was now 6 o'clock. A few minutes after daylight, as we were about taking the first lady from the cabin door, a heavy sea swept the decks, swamping the vessel; she made one lurch and went down. MUSCAT PERLE, Fine Imported Wine.

In introducing the celebrated brand of MUSCAT PEBLE to the favorable notice of the elite, we deem it necessary to state that it is made of the choicest of the Muscat grapes, called "La MUSCAT PERLE. though possessing an exquisite fruitiness, is so generous by its nature, that, though containing no additional brandy or alchohol, it will preserve its "boques" for any length of time after it is opened, quite different from those wines that deteriorate and become utterly worthless when opened to the atmosphere.

The most refuned will hail with peasure a PURE WINE in the full sense of the work—a wine that will feel grateful to the most delicate, as it produces no activity on the stomach; but, sue contraire, acts as the most scooting of cordials.

Connoisseurs who have tried this wine par excellence, are most enthusiastic in its praise, and declare that they never tasted any real wine before, and never will use any other.

It is Especially adapted for Ladles, and Sur-passes any Table Wine in the Country. Church People are invited to Examine this Wine for Com-munion Purposes.

PURITY, DELICACY OF FLAVOR AND MILDNESS, ARE MUSCAT PERLE.

HYGIENIC WINE ALSO IMPORTED It is only necessary to earl attention to the following FACTS regarding HYGIENIC WINE:

1. HYGIENIC WINE is the only Tonic which receives the unhesitating approval of all Physicians.

2. HYGIENIC WINE was tested at at the Baltimore Convention of the American Medical vascitation, May 1, 1866, and endorsed by the prominent members with their signature.

3. It contains no Waiskey or Alcoholic admixture whatever.

4. It is prepared in Paris from pure Sherry.

[T Every one who is interested in Pure Fine Hines, should examine the merits of these Wines. Sold by all druggists.

A STILL DAY IN AUTUMN.

- BY MRS. HARM HELEN WHITMAN. I love to wander through the woodland heary, In the soft gloom of the Autumnal day, When Summer gathers up her robes of glory And like a dream the beauty glides away.
- The moist winds breathe of clasped leaves and flower In the damp hollows of the woodland sown, Mingled the freshness of Autumnal showers With spicy airs from ordern alleys blown.
- Beside the brook and on the umbered meadow, Where yellow fern tufts fleck the faded ground
- With folded lids beneath their paimy shadow, The gentian nods, in downy slumbers bound. Upon those soft, fringed lids the bee sits brooding, Like a fond lover loth to say farewell— Own with shut wings, though aliken folds intruding, Creeps near her heart his wary tale to tell.
- The little birds upon the hillside lonely, Fit noiselessly along from spray to spray, Slient as a sweet, wandering thought that only Shows its bright wings and softly glides away,
- The scentlese flowers in the warm sunlight dreaming, Forget to breathe their fullness of delight, And through the transcet woods soft airs are streaming Still as the dew-fall on a summer night.

Our Story-Teller.

THE STORY OF A BURGLARY.

In October last, I was invited by a friend of min whose daughter was about to be married, to go to London to attend the wedding. He had taken a large house in one of the streets leading out of Piccadilly (which I will call Folkstone Street), and was so good as to offer me a room for the marriage-week. Havas to offer me a room for the marriage-week. Hav-ing been out of health for some time, and needing a change, I thankfully accepted his offer, and made my preparations for the journey at once. I reached London about a week before the important

I reached London about a week before the important day; and to those who know anything about weddings, and especially weddings "in high-life" (so, I believe the correct phrase runs), I need not say that this week was a busy one. The presents were numerous, and consisted chiefly of jewelry. The trousseau, I was informed, could not be surpassed; but of that I am not qualified, nor is it any part of my purpose, to speak. I am only concerned to state that the presents of jewelry were numerous and valuable. As they were brought in by messenger after messenger from the vaeiry were numerous and valuable. As they were brought in by messenger after messenger from the va-rious jewellers' shops, they were placed for inspection by visitors, with other presents, in the front drawing-room, which, I may observe, had four large windows all looking into the main street.

The marriage was fixed for a Tuesday; and on the Saturday previous, my friend gave a dinner-party to re-Saturday previous, my friend gave a dinner-party to re-lations on both sides, and a good many people were in-vited to come in the evening to inspect the presents and the trousseau. As it was Saturday night, every-body departed shortly after twelve o'clock; and by one o'clock, every light was extinguished. No sus-picion of robbery seems to have entered into the head of any of us, and the jewelry and other valuable pre-sents were left exposed in the front drawing-room all that night. But on the next night, the groum of the chambers did seem to have a little anxiety at having so much valuable property exposed in so open a manso much valuable property exposed in so open a man-ner, and he communicated his uneasiness to his mis-tress. The most costly of the jewels were, in accord-ance with his suggestion, placed in a large jewel-box, and deposited at bedtime in his mistress's bed-room.— So little real anxiety, however, was felt by any one, that a magnificent dressing-case and dressing-bag, both with gold fittings of very great volue, were left,

I had in the room with me. I looked up and saw the door of my bedroom open gradually, and a bright light shine through it. I called out at once in a loud voice: "Who's there?" when the door was quickly and never dreamed of thieves, for I had been similarly dis-turbed the night before; my impression was, that some servant had mistaken the room, the house being strange to all the inmates. I struck a light, and looking at my watch, found the time to be four o'clock. For a time, I listened intently, but soon, finding that all was quiet, I turned on my side, and tried to get to sleep again. This, however, proved to be impossible, and I got no more sleep that night. About five o'clock, I heard some noises in the next bedroom to my own, and concluded that my neighbor was stirring; and at half-past five, I heard somebody stumble over a box in the passage outside my door. But it still never occur-ed to me to think of thieves. I imagined still, that in the hurry of preparation for the wedding, some sered to me to think of thieves. I imagined still, that in the hurry of preparation for the wedding, some servant had been compelled to rise earlier than usual, and had stumbled in going down stairs in the dark; but as I could not get to sleep, I determined to get up, and at ten minutes to six o'clock by my watch, I left my room to go to another at the end of the passage. The moment I left my door, I saw a man standing ten yards from me. The fellow, who was about six feet two inches in height, and most powerfully made, was listening at the door of a bedroom close to mine, and had his hand on the handle when I first saw him; but listening at the door of a bedroom close to mine, and had his hand on the handle when I first saw him; but the moment he caught sight of me, he made a rush either to collar me or to get by me, I don't know which; and seeing this, I drew back, and allowed him to pass The next moment, I gave the alarm, and the hou hold was speedily aroused. An attempt at pursuit was made; but the minute or two which had elapsed enabled the burglars to make good their retreat, and they

The next thing to be done was to ascertain the extent of our losses; and a very casual inspection decided this. Everything of silver or gold in the house which they could lay their hands upon, they had carried off, but only such articles as were very portable. that of our lowers and a very casual impection indications which they could by their hashin was drived that the control of the

But not only had they been seen; the tall man had actually spoken to a commissionnarie stationed in the district, and had been observed to have a foreigner accent. It seemed most probable, therefore that the man of whom they were in search was a foreigner, and the suspended sergeant determined at once to follow up this slight clue.

But there are a great many tall, dark foreigners in London, and the sergeant's task seemed one of no slight difficulty; however, he was a determined man, of irregular shadown and thought out the whole of London; so he shadown and thought out the whole of London; so he shadown and thought out the whole matter, and decided upon the course he would pursue. He could not held the roam in question was a discharged Swiss or Italian valst, or courier or something of that kind; so, following up this idea, he went to call upon a friend of his who kept a very respectable public-house at the West End of the town. This man had been a courier him at table-d'hole that for them at his house, of which daily for them at his house, of which do the foreigner socasionally availed themselves. After much consultation with the landlord, he determined to attend the table-d'hole that day, on the chance of seeing his man. so deeply, that he determined to leave no stone unturned that a magnificent dressing-case and dressing-bag, both with gold fittings of very great value, were left, with numerous other articles, in one of the back drawing-rooms, without even the key of either being turned in the lock, On that Sunday night, or rather early on the Monday morning, the house was robbed.

It will be well, perhaps, before I proceed farther in my narrative, that I should give a general idea of the number and position of the rooms on the three principal floors of the house. On the ground floor there were dining-room, breakfast-room, and morning-rooms. On the first floor, there were three drawing-rooms; and besides these, there was built out at the back, and lying beyond the servants' staircase, the bedroom and eresing-room inhabited by my friend and his wife, and in which the jewels had been deposited. On the second floor were four bedrooms and a dressing-room cocupied by different members of the family and myself.

I went to bed about eleven o'clock, and must have slept soundly for about four or five hours, when I was awaktened by the violent barking of a little dog which I had in the room with me. I looked up and saw the down of my hedroom core was darked by the violent barking of a little dog which I had in the room with me. Railroad Signals.

The varieties of the "toot" of the locomotive, and the gyrations of the arms of the conductors by day, or lanterns by night, about as intelligent to most people as the first class Chootaw. The following will give the reader a correct idea of their signification:

One whistles—"down brakes."

Two whistles—"off brakes."

Three whistles—"thack un."

Continuous whistles—"danger."

A rapid succession of short whistles is the cattle alarm, at which the brakes will always be put down.

A sweeping parting of hands on level of eyes is a signal to "go ahead." A downward motion of the hand, with extended

A lantern raised and lowered vertically, is a signal for "starting;" swung at right angles or crossways the track, "stop;" swung in a circle "back the train." A red flag waved upon the track must be regarded as a signal of danger. So of other signals given with energy.

Hoisted at a station, is a signal for a train "to stop."
Stuck up by the road-side it is a signal of danger or the track ahead.

Carried unfurled upon an engine, is a warning that another engine or train is on its way.

The Famiy Circle.

If there had been any bond in life which ought to be guarded from everything that can put it in peril, it is that which unites the members of a family. If there be a spot upon earth from which discord and strife should be banished, it is the fireside. There center the fondest hopes and the most tender affections. How lovely the spectacle presented by that family which is governed by the right spirit! Each strives to avoid giving offense, and is studiously considerate of the others' happiness. Sweet, loving dispositions are cultivated by all, and each tries to surpass the other in his efforts for the common harmony. Each heart glows with love; and the benediction of heavenly peace seems to abide upon that dwelling with such power that no black fiend of passion dare rear his head within it.

Who would not realize this lovely picture? It may be realized by all who employ the appointed means.

Let the precepts of the Gospel be applied as they are designed to be; and they will be found to shed a holy charm upon the family circle, and make it what God descreted its chould be the most heaven like scene or designed it should be, the most heaven-like scene on

LIVES LOST BY THE REBELLION. The War Department computes the number of deaths in the Union armies since the commencement of the war, at 325,000, and of Southern soldiers at 200,000, making at least 525,000 lives that have been lost, a part of the costly price paid for the defence of the nation's life. At Gettysburg 28,000 Union soldiers were killed, wounder of the state prisoners. ed, or taken prisoners—our greatest loss during one campaign. Gen. Grant's losses, from the time he crossed the Rapidan until Lee's surrender were about Siomach for him which had before yielded to nothing but chloroerossed the raphush until Lee's surrender were about 90,000. Great as were our losses, they were far below those incurred in European wars, owing to our superior medical and sanitary arrangements, and the care of the government for its troops.

A Wife's Influence. You fancy, perhaps, as you have been told so often, that a wife's rule should only be over her husband's house, and not his mind. No! the true rule is just the reverse of that. A true wife in her husband's house, is the servant; it is in his heart that she is queen. Whatever of best he can conceive, it is her part to be; whatever of highest he can hope, it is hers to promise; all that is dark in him she must make pure; all that is failing in him she must strengthen into truth; from her, through all the world's clam-or, he must win his praise; in her through all the world's warfare, he must find his peace.

BURKE'S IDEA OF LIBERTY. He says: "Men are qualified for civil liberty in exact proportion to their disposition to put chains upon their own appetites; in proportion as their love of justice is above their rapacity; in proportion as they are more disposed to listen to the counsels of the wise and good in preference to the flattery of knaves."

MANSFIELD, REDLON & Co., 27 Green Street. PORTLAND, ME.

PATENTED MAY 29, 1866.

PATEMEED MAX 29, 1896.

This is article for washing without rubbing, except in very dirty places, which will require a very slight rub, and unlike other preparations offered for a like purpose, will not rot the clothes, but will leave them much whiter than ordinary methods, without the usual wear and tear.

It removes greaze spots as if by magic, and softens the dirt by soaking, so that rusing will in ordinary cases entirely rezsove it. This powder is prepared in accordance with chemical science, and upon a process peculiar to itself, which is secured by Letters Patens. It has been in use for more than a year, and has proved itself an universal favorite wherever it has been used. Among the advantages claimed are the following, vis:

It saves all the expense of soap usually used on cotton and linen goods goods

It saves most of the labor of rubbing, and wear and tear.
Also, for cleaning windows it is unsurpassed. With one quarter the time and labor usually required, it imparts a beautiful gloss and lustre, much suserior to any other mode. No water required washing for a namely of live or ax persons win no excess.

The manufacturers of this powder are aware that many useless compounds have been introduced to the public which have rotted the cloth, or failed in removing the dirt, but knowing the intrinsic excellence of this article, they confidently proclaim it as being-diapted to meet a demand which has long existed, and which has hertofore remained unsupplied. SILVER PLATING Brass, Copper, German Silver, Bronze, &c.

Cleaning and Polishing Silver and Silver-plated

Although an entirely new invention, this article has already ex-cited the surprise and admiration of many of the prominent scien-tific men of the day, and is prenounced, by all who have seen is almost magical operation, one of the most valuable inventions of tine men of the day, and is pronounced, by all who have seen its almost magical operation, one of the most valuable inventions of modern fines.

It is a complete electro silver-plating battery in a bottle, and is destined to work wonders in every household; as by its use all silver-plated ware, whose plating is worn off can be restored to its original beauty, and articles of brass, copper, derman silver, &c., can be instantaneously plated with pure silver, at a cost so trifling that no family need be without it.

There are thousands of articles in daily use made of the baser metals, which, by an occasional use of the Silverine, may be made highly ornamental as well as useful. It is perhaps needless to say that the Bilverine, as its name applies, is a preparation of Pure Silver, and contains no Mercury, acid, or other ingredients, nor any property in the slightest degree injurious to metals or the hands.

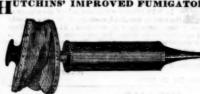

Applied to Silver-plated Table ware, Fruit Dishes, Trays, Castors, Stair Rods, Harness Trimmings, Military Equipments, Doc Knobe and Plates, Metallie Window and Show Case Frames, &c., whose plating is worn off, it gives them all the beauty of new wars, which they will retain if the Silverine is applied as often as such articles are ordinarily cleaned.

Applied to Copper, Brass or Broome articles, it will keep them leanthfully silvered, with one quarter the trouble required to keep them clean by scouring, &c.

cautifully silvered, with one quarter them clean by sourring, &c.
It will also be found the best and most economical silver cleans over used, producing all the brilliancy of unalloyed silver.

Gentlemen: Section 1. Messrs. Seth W. Fowle & Co.

Gentlemen: Seeing numerous certificates in the Maine Farmers endorsing the merits of that Great Lung Remedy, WISTAR'S plantage of the Committee of the Great Lung Remedy, WISTAR'S plantage of the Committee of the Great Lung Remedy, WISTAR'S plantage of the Committee of the Great Lung Remedy, WISTAR'S plantage of the Great Lung Remedy, Wistard of the Great Lung Remedy of the great cure it accomplished in my family in the year 1856 During the summer of that year my son, Henry A. Archer, now Postmaster at Fairfield, Somerset of County, Me., was attacked with spitting of blood, cough, weakness of lungs, and general debility, so much so that our family physician declared him to have a "Searny Conscurring." He was under medical treatment for a number of months, but received no benefit from it. At length, from the solicitation of himself and others, I was induced to purchase one bottle of WISTAR'S BALS AM OF WILLD CHERRY, which benefitted him so much I obtained another hottle, which in a short time restored him to his usual state of health. I think I can safely recommend this remedy to others in like condition, for it is, I think, all it purports to be—THE GREAT LUNG REMEDY FOR THE THEMS!

The above statement, gentlemen, is my voluntary offering to you in favor of your Balsam, and is at your disposal rom Rev. Francis Londell, Pastor of the South Congrega tional Church, Bridgeport, Connecticut. Gentlemen:—I consider it a duty which I owe to suffering lummanity to bear testimony to the virtues of Dn. Wistan's Balsand or Will Cherner. I have used it—when I have had consion for any remedy for Coughs, Colds, or Sore Throat—for many years, and never, in any instance, has it failed to relieve and cure me. I have frequently been very hoarse on Saturday, and looked forward to the delivery of two sermons on the following day with sad misgivings, but by a liberal use of the Balsam sily hourseness has invariably been removed, and I have preached without difficulty. I commend it to my brethere in the ministry, and to public speakers generally, as a certain remedy for the bronchial troubles to which we are peculiarly exposed. Entirely unsolicited, I send you this testimorial, which you are at liberty to use in any way you choose. Perhaps the Balsam

Dr. Were—Deer Str.: It is a pleasure to inform you of the great benefits received from the use of your Pils, which were obtained from your agent about four months since. I had been wear ing out for several years with Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, &c., and from the sickness and general debility suffered, I have reason to consider mine a severe case. At least I had found all efforts for a cure to prove unavailing, until I had concluded there was no cure for me, and that I must submit to bear disease as patiently as possible, and probably should never have been induced to try your Pilis, had not a severe attack of Diptheria come upon me. Finding that your Pilis bore the best reputation for the cure of Diptheria, I consented to try them, and finding mayeff so readily cured of what all considered a very dangerous onse of Diptheria, it gave me confidence to continue their use, and such a sure has been efficied for me that I consider them all they are recommended to be.

I find them, both for myself and family, superior to any medicine we ever used. They have a large sale in this place, and I have inquired extensively of those using them, and find that those who have bought once buy again; that they give the most general satisfaction of any medicine ever introduced to my knowledge.
